

Carlitos: “Without the forest there would be no water, no life or air”

Carlitos, the boy who is portrayed on our GlobalGiving page is now 10 years old! He is growing along with the trees he planted six years ago with his parents. He continues accompanying them during the yearly reforestations enjoying every minute of it. In an interview he told us that reforesting is very important because, “some people cut trees and don’t plant any new ones and then we would be left with no trees at all.” He also wisely said that “without trees, there would be no water, life or air.” Carlitos is an example of how reforestations not only help restore the forest but also raises awareness in those involved in planting trees. Let’s support Carlitos so he continues valuing the forest by planting trees every summer!
